WHAT COULD THIS PLEDGE MEAN?

A fully transparent redistricting process with robust citizen engagement.

- Public hearings across the state before and after the release of draft maps
- Two weeks for public review before voting on maps
- Consideration of maps submitted by the public
- Information printed in more than one language

Fair district maps, validated by independent experts, reflecting diversity and communities of interest in Georgia, which do not unnaturally favor any political party.

- Utilize independent, non-partisan benchmarks for fairness
- Release partisan lean of proposed districts in addition to racial demographics

Competitive districts that give voters meaningful candidate choices

- Prioritize competitive districts over incumbency protection

An end to mid-cycle redistricting and prison gerrymandering.

- Mid-cycle redistricting only helps the party currently in charge, and isn't fair.
- Prisoners aren't counted in their home district, but instead where they're incarcerated, giving those communities skewed numbers.
